Two Properties Protected at the End of 2010

Kurt Schlimme, Director of Conservation

On December 30, 2010, LinkBros, LLC donated a one-acre tract of land on Pleasant Green Road to the Eno River Association to fill a missing section in the route of the North Carolina Mountains-to-Sea Trail. The property, which has approximately 200 feet of frontage on the Eno River, will be donated by the Association to the State of North Carolina for inclusion in the Eno River State Park.

More than 500 miles of the Mountains-to-Sea Trail have been built in segments across the state, joined together by temporary connectors on back roads and state bike routes. Acquisition of the Link property will allow completion of the section of trail through the Eno River State Park between the Cabe Lands area and Pleasant Green Road. On June 4, as part of National Trails Day, the ERA—in partnership with the Friends of the Mountains-to-Sea Trail—will hold a trail construction workday for this section of the trail.

In addition to its contribution to local and state-wide recreation, acquisition of the property will provide critical ecological and resource protection. The donation of this property completes over 8.5 miles of (see Properties, page 3)

In our own words....

— a column devoted to the thoughts, comments, and perspectives of the staff and board

Join us in welcoming our newest staff member, Cynthia Satterfield, Director of Development, in her own words...

“I was lucky enough to grow up in a house overlooking the Eno River just outside of Hillsborough. Just outside my back door, the river and the woods were an enormous playground for me, and my friends. Without a doubt, I know that my curious nature, adventurous spirit, and passion for the natural world are tied completely to my early outdoor escapades.

After graduating from UNC-Chapel Hill, I left Orange County and worked for several years in the cultural resources management field—first as a field technician on archaeological projects in North Carolina, Virginia and New Jersey—then as a researcher and surveyor of historic resources across the state. I met my husband Dean Ruedrich, a restoration contractor and gravestone conservator, while working at Historic Stagville in the mid-90s. Our first date was to the Festival for the Eno and last year we celebrated our 15th anniversary at the Festival!

Before joining the ERA staff, I worked for six and a half years raising money and awareness for another North Carolina land trust based in Louisburg. Now I feel like I've finally come home, and am so excited to be a part of the Eno River Association family.

To be sure, ERA has an impressive 45-year history. But in order to remain a conservation powerhouse, we need to stay nimble and ready to act on critical land acquisition opportunities. We need to be responsive to legislative and local planning issues, and able to provide quality education programs that nurture our next generation of environmental stewards. What this requires is money—both unrestricted funding that allows us to be alert to the opportunities that exist, and program funding that allows us to pursue them.

I'm going to need your help raising these funds and urge each of you to re-commit yourselves to the ERA cause. The Eno is not only an extraordinary natural resource; it's a place that holds very deep personal meaning to many of us. I look forward to working with each of you and as a community to save this place we love!”

LAND TRUSTS
Saving the Places You Love

(Properties, from page 1) permanently protected frontage along the southern bank of the Eno River, stretching from Pleasant Green Road in Orange County to Roxboro Road in the City of Durham.

The donation of the property was made by John M. Link Jr., Thomas E. Link, and Robert E. Link, the Members of LinkBros, LLC, in loving memory of their great grandfather, Emmett Green Link, and their mother and father, Peggy Sykes Link and John M. Link Sr. The Link family has deep roots along the Eno River. This land has been owned by the family for more than 100 years. “We have always called it the Spring Lot,” says Thomas Link. “Fable has it that the spring on the property has never dried up in the last 250 years.” The Links are also no strangers to conservation along the Eno River. In 2009 they worked with the Association to donate 17 acres for inclusion into the Eno River State Park.

In addition to the Link donation, the Association also helped the Orange County Lands Legacy complete a “forever wild” conservation easement on a five-acre, undeveloped parcel near the Association’s Confluence Natural Area. Conservation of this property, which has approximately 400 feet of frontage on the Eno River, will provide permanent protection for important riparian areas and wildlife habitat and add to the significant amount of protected land already located along this section of the Eno River.

TRAVELING Ts

Elias Ammon—age 4½, wearing the 2010 Eno cottontail rabbit t-shirt—traveled with his family to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park last September.

Highlights from the trip included an encounter with a black bear and the entire family (mom Kristen, dad Christopher, and baby brother Ethan) reaching the top of Clingman’s Dome (6,643 ft), the third highest mountain east of the Mississippi! The two highest peaks east of the Mississippi are both located in Mt. Mitchell State Park in western North Carolina.

Trivia Question: What “mountain” is the highest point in Orange County?

Answer: Oconeechee Mountain, 867 ft.

goal of reaching all of the schools in the Eno River basin within the next five years.

- Rising sixth-grade students from Orange County School district and Durham Public Schools Easley, Eno Valley, and Hillandale are eligible to apply for the 2011 camp.
- Student applications can be downloaded at www.iwalktheeno.org.
- The deadline for submitting a student application is March 4.

Our camp website has lots of photos and information about the program—please check it out at iwalktheeno.org or contact the Eno Education program director Kathy Lee at kathy@enoriver.org or 919-620-9099 x204.

The iWalk the Eno camp for rising sixth-grade students is expanding! This popular day camp was founded in 2008 as a partnership between Orange County School and the Eno River Association, with funding from the Burroughs Wellcome Fund Student Science Enrichment Program. We are pleased to be opening the program this year to several Durham Schools, with the RiverWatch educates, engages, and empowers citizens to learn about their local waterways and the challenges to those special places, helping you address challenges to your own neighborhood stream and better understand the watershed as a whole. The curriculum helps people understand the characteristics of a healthy stream and recognize hidden threats. You can join a network of other volunteers at monthly meetings to learn from area experts, hear how others have made a difference, and share success stories from your neighborhood.

Everyone's Eno Calendar

We've decided it's time to put together an Eno calendar that reflects a community effort and a mosaic of what makes the Eno special from many perspectives. Everyone is invited to submit something to the 2012 Eno calendar, from digital or film images to short personal essays or poems. Look back through your photo files and journals for gems from the past, or let the Eno be your muse today!

Visit www.enoriver.org to download the submission form and guidelines.

Deadline: May 1, 2011

A Wildflower Walk with Milo Pyne: Willie Duke's Bluff

“As we cross the abandoned railroad tracks and walk past boulders and scrap metal, we cross a sunny power line and enter the shady woods. The south side of the river has a diverse character, and differs from the upper river, with high, rocky ground in places, and a steep drop to the water. There is a distinctive area, a kind of backswamp where low ground meets a rich slope. This is the first place we encounter Dutchman's-breeches (Dicentra cucullaria), one of the unusual wildflowers found here. Some years, the flowers are abundant, other years the river has recently overflowed, and water covers some of their habitat.

We get our first glimpse of the habitat for which this area is best known: a narrow floodplain which meets a steep, north-facing bluff. The buckeye (Aesculus sylvatica) and pawpaw (Asimina triloba), which are normally small shrubs, become subcanopy trees and tower above our heads. We make a mental note to come back and see if the brown pawpaw flowers are followed by the famous sweet, custardy fruits in August.

Farther downstream, we find a large swamp chestnut oak (Quercus muehlenbergii) towering over the trail. We climb a little hill and find the ruins of the foundations of small cabins where people enjoyed the view of the river here. The tallest and steepest of the bluffs is said to be the place where Brother Willie Duke, the brother of the tobacco magnate Washington Duke, practiced his preaching to the critters of the forest. Below us are mountain laurel shrubs (Kalmia latifolia) that indicate an outcrop of acidic sandstones, adding to the plant diversity we enjoy on our hike.

We pause to take in the scene, and embrace the seeming remoteness of this place, before heading back on the trail to more familiar and civilized places.”

Read more from Milo's Willie Duke's Bluff walk in the Eno Calendar, April 2011.

The Association, Donated Conservation Easements, and You

The Eno River Association is working to greatly expand our conservation easement program in 2011. Easements can be a powerful tool for land conservation. Under a conservation easement, land remains in private ownership, use, and management. However, certain restrictions for future development or other management activities are placed on the land. The extent of these restrictions is tailored to each individual case, with landowner objectives and the property's natural resources being considered. When conservation easements are donated, there can be significant tax benefits to the landowner. In fact, at the end of 2010 Congress renewed the enhanced federal tax incentives for conservation easement donations, including bargain sales. The incentives, which had expired at the end of 2009, will have significant impact on the benefits most landowners are able to reap from a conservation donation.

The new law:

- Raises the deduction a donor can take for donating a voluntary conservation agreement from 30 percent of their income in any year to 50 percent;
- Allows farmers and ranchers to deduct up to 100% of their income; and
- Increases the number of years over which a donor can take deductions from 6 to 16 years.

While this renewal is a wonderful vote of confidence for the importance of land conservation by individual landowners, currently these incentives are only temporary. At the end of 2011, benefits revert back to their earlier limits. If you have considered placing an easement on your property, this coming year is the time to make it happen.

For more information about placing a conservation easement on your property, please contact Kurt Schlimme, Director of Conservation, 919-620-9099 or kurt@enoriver.org.
