Land Protection Update

Klugh Jordan, Director of Land Protection

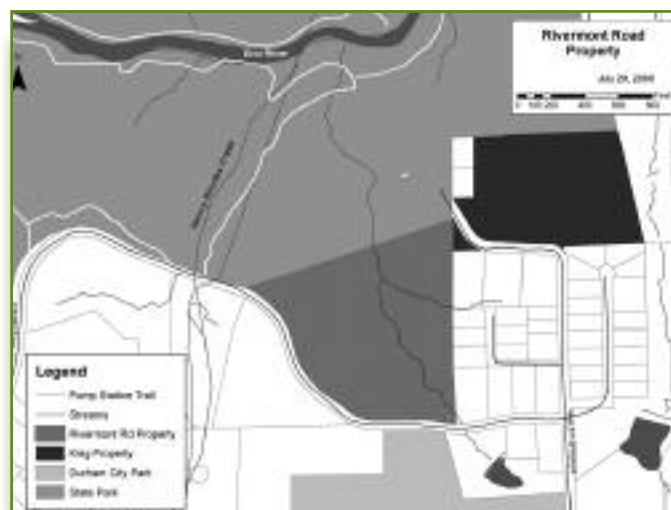

On July 10, the Association closed on a 21-acre property adjacent to the Eno River State Park in Durham County. This property protects 1,750 feet of stream buffer along a tributary to the Eno River, and it is designated as a Significant Natural Heritage Area.

The property was purchased from Unique Places, LLC, a private conservation real estate company that held the property for nearly a year while we secured funding. The tract is in a fast growing area of the county and was in danger of being developed. This could have impacted the current backwoods feel of the Pump Station Trail, one of the more popular hiking trails within the Park, particularly for spring wildflower viewing. It is also adjacent to a 15-acre property that the Association purchased with help from Durham County in the late 1990s. With the acquisition of this important piece, we expect to transfer both properties to the state for inclusion into the Park this fall.

More State Park projects are in the works, so stayed tuned to future newsletters for continued updates. If you want to learn more about protecting your property in the Eno River Basin through a sale or conservation easement, or would like to hear about conservation management options, please contact Klugh Jordan at (919) 620-9099, ext. 201 or klugh@enoriver.org.

New State Park additions

The mission of the Eno River Association is to conserve and protect the nature, culture, and history of the Eno River basin.

VOLUNTEERUS KINDUS.

PERSONAS ALTRUISTICA.

JOYFULITUS TUCKERDOUTIOUS!

Oh...hello...hi there. What are these, you ask? Just some hypothetical Genus/Species names I'm throwing around to describe the wonderful, colorful creatures I had the pleasure of observing this summer. I have no formal training in field observation or, you may be shocked to hear, in Latin. But I'm going out on a "scientific limb" nonetheless—in an attempt to classify, describe and sum up these rare and inspiring specimens.

You see, this was my first summer as the Volunteer Coordinator for the Festival for the Eno and—yessir—it was fun. Nothing could have prepared me for just how awesome it would be to watch hundreds and hundreds of you congregate and, in a mass display of cooperative social effort, affect positive change in your environment.

Caitlin Harris

Christy Smith

You sorted and recycled trash. You took tickets. You prepared food. You sold merchandise and drinks. You painted faces. You managed others. You said, "I'm sorry, you can't come in this gate without an appropriate badge, sir." You shoveled mulch (LOTS of it). You sat for hours in a hot parking lot. You pulled a last-minute, double shift. You were there for the first time. You were there for the 15th year in a row. You were there not because you had to be, but because you chose to be, because you are a very unique type of creature—one who is kind, altruistic, and joyful even when you're tuckered out.

You're a volunteer.

And I—along with the entire ERA board and staff—want to thank you from the bottom of our hearts for the dedication you brought to this year's Festival. The event would never be possible without your volunteer hours. So we thank you and thank you AGAIN for being there.

I enjoyed meeting, organizing and observing you this summer, Personas Altruistica! And I have been humbled and inspired by the goodness of your spirits.

Keep up the good work!

Christy Smith, Volunteer Coordinator
 2008 Festival for the Eno

Reflections from the River

Esi Waters, Education Intern

When I accepted the offer to be the Environmental Education Intern I had never even heard of the Eno River. After eleven great weeks of working with the ERA, the River is all I ever talk about. It's been amazing to be around people who work selflessly and tirelessly to protect and conserve the river basin for others.

As an intern, I've seen much of what goes on "behind the scenes." I've talked to Klugh about the process of land acquisition. I've seen Kurt organize stewardship workdays.

Esi Waters

I've witnessed Greg and Maddiey work with Festival performers. I've been with Kathy as she explains the importance of mayflies in the river to an 11-year-old. I've seen Robin write countless emails thanking people for their time and financial support. I've popped in on a board meeting and been to committee meetings. I've been to the Eno River State Park and seen many people enjoying the river and its banks. I've even gone down to the river alone to just admire the peace and tranquility that can be found there.

Even though I will be in the area for just one more year, I can't wait to see what we will be able to accomplish about our dream for total protection of Eno's banks. When the dream becomes a reality, it will be the direct result of your hard work. So thank you to the members, board, and staff of the Eno River Association. Your love for the river is contagious and I've caught the bug; hopefully, this is a "disease" that I'm never cured of.

"Reflections from the River" is a new column in the Eno Currents quarterly newsletter, inviting voices and perspectives from people of all ages, with a theme of connection to the Eno River and surrounding land. Submission requirements:

- Winter newsletter deadline: October 20, 2008
- 250 words or less
- association@enoriver.org or fax 919-477-0448

Festival for the Eno 2008

Backyard Chickens, the Handmade Parade, Hula Hoops, the High Strung Music Area, Ukelele Lessons...; these were but a few of the new features at this summer's 29th Festival for the Eno. Despite the record nine inches of rain that fell on the Festival site over the three days of the Festival, the site remained dry and navigable—thanks to a wonderful group of mulch- and hay-spreading volunteers.

We are already working towards a great 30th anniversary Festival for the Eno next summer, but hope you'll take a few moments to look at some pictures of Festival highlights, as well as the amazing list of folks who helped out with donations of time, services, money or goods. "Thanks" to everyone who helped make the 2008 Festival a success, and we'll see you next summer (if not before)!

The Orange County Schools-Eno River Association

iWalk the Eno Camp was held June 16-20.

iWalk the Eno Journal

Liz Stabenow, Science Teacher & iWalk Co-teacher of the Copperheads Group

DAY ONE: OCONEECHEE MOUNTAIN

I meet my campers and am immediately concerned. Our plan is to take them up and over the mountain and back again prior to lunch. Off we go with a lecture on drinking lots of water and the many uses of a bandana. I try to get them to sing a song with monadanock in it but they look at me like I'm a bit daft!

DAY TWO: HILLSBOROUGH

Poof! We are at the river. Most excitingly, we get to get our feet wet today. Splashing, catching tadpoles, looking at little river critters, there is palpable excitement in the group. Much to my relief, they all do get wet, and love it. I remind them we can't go "swimming" and several just soak themselves by lying down in the water. I applaud.

DAY THREE: FEW'S FORD

I have always loved a day at the State Park and sure enough things really come together. The kids can't wait to get in the water, but do, crossing the swinging bridge and having a thoughtful discussion on the porch of the O'Briant Cabin. It all seems to gel, as they get as excited as I do when they find a water penny ("That's a good one, right?" they ask.) I treat them to my locally famous larvae dance. A few of them dance for me and I love it. I am already thinking a week is too short.

DAY FOUR: WEST POINT

I feel at home here and the kids are really in the zone. The mill and the water wheel mesmerize them. We take a hike to Sennet's Hole and I tell them a ghost tale. We get really, really wet and are crawdad experts by now, everyone hoping to find the special one with the ladle on it. It doesn't matter that we don't, we are all excited to finish our weeklong art project and the Eno critters have come to life from recycled paper and cornstarch.

DAY FIVE: PENNY'S BEND

Where are the canoes? When we find them, we forget a few things, like the fact that some kids have never been on the water before and might be nervous. Who knew this would be a new experience for so many kids? Or that putting an adult in every boat would not insure that the boat would make it upriver at any point! Again, it doesn't matter, we all paddle around and have a blast.

As the day draws to a close, we all feel like it ended too soon. Many ask to come again next year, many tell me they will see me again at the Handmade Parade or the Festival, many say they are bringing their family to the river. It's okay, I can let them go.

ENO READING GROUP

Each month we read selections from the newly published American Earth: Environmental Writing Since Thoreau, available at the Regulator Bookshop, other local bookstores, and hopefully at your local library.

The Eno brown bag lunch reading group meets on the 4th Wednesday every month from 12:30–1:30pm downstairs at the Regulator Bookshop on Ninth Street in Durham. 2009 ENO RIVER ASSOCIATION CALENDAR IN STORES SOON!

We are pleased to present the 38th Annual Eno River Association Calendar featuring Birds of the Eno. Learn each month about the birds found in and around the Eno River. Every page of the calendar features a color photograph of a local bird with identification tips and information about its habitat, plus an original painting or drawing submitted by local students during our calendar art contest this past spring.

Enormous appreciation goes out to Tom Driscoll, Eno board member and chair of the calendar committee this year, who brought his enthusiasm and extensive knowledge about birds and bird habitat to this project. Thanks also to the volunteer photographers, writers, and young artists who submitted their work for use in the calendar.

The Eno River calendar inspires and reminds us each day of the year about what we've been working to protect for more than forty years.

For a listing of local retail shops selling the 2009 Eno calendar visit www.enoriver.org/calendar/caloc.htm or contact the Eno office to purchase a calendar directly from us: calendars@enoriver.org or 919-620-9099 ext. 205.
